JOINT CONFERENCE OF COAL MEN AGAIN POSTPONED.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Negotiations between bituminous coal miners and operators in the central competitive field continued at a standstill today, the operators again obtaining postponement of the joint conference of wage scale committees on the grounds that their counter proposal had not been completed.

The operators were said to be considering very carefully where the money to pay wage increases would come from and possibly effect the granting of the workers' demands might have on the future budget of the mines. Assurances will be sought from several government departments before reply is made to the miners' demands for increased wages and shorter hours. Persistent rumor that the operators had asked for a conference with Fuel Administrator Garfield to learn how much increase in the cost of production, due to wage advances could be passed on to the consuming public were denied again today by Dr. Garfield.

The possibility of federal control of the mines in case of popular disapproval of higher prices of coal was said to be receiving the close attention of the operators.

NATION-WIDE EMBARGO ON FREIGHT MAY BE ESTABLISHED TO CONSERVE COAL SUPPLY

Director General Hines Considerers Plan to Keep the Railroads Going.

THE SITUATION IS SERIOUS

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Director General W. B. Hines of the railroads and seven regional directors will meet here late today to consider a nation-wide freight embargo as a means of conserving the country's meager supply of coal. Mr. Hines is expected to arrive in Chicago this afternoon.

The conditions growing out of the emergency were informally discussed this morning by the regional directors who planned to have a definite program ready to submit to the director general.

An embargo on all freight on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad between Chicago and the Pacific coast has been in effect since Saturday. If Director General Hines approves the recommendation of his regional directors an order may be issued immediately which will mean a nationwide embargo on freight.

A 40 per cent cut in passenger train service throughout the country.

Closing down of all non-essential industries.

Fifteen million workmen thrown out of work.

The situation is extremely serious and immediate action is necessary, said R. H. Ashton, regional director of the Northwestern road. The railroads are vital to the business life of the nation and they must be kept going. Radical action must be taken.

My judgment that a general embargo is the only way to meet the emergency.

Chickens do not often lay eggs in trees and less frequently do they batch their young there. But there are exceptions to all rules and here is one. A big Plymouth Rock on the farm of John Moreland in Dunbar township, near Hickory Bottom, chose a hollow place in the fork of a great willow, seven feet above the ground, by the spring back of the house for her nest. Unknown to the members of the family she deposited a dozen eggs there. Not until the incubation was well under way was it known biddy was preparing to bring a flock of little "rocks" into the world.

The cause which they made on Sunday afternoon had a wonderful effect in Fairview avenue, with Mrs. Herbert Pratt hostess. The choir of the church will be held tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock in the church house.

Ordinary is an old saying. In spite of the fact that scores of Methodists attend the funeral services for John McCready, a large audience was present to hear Rev. N. L. Brown of Scottdale, who preached a most excellent sermon on "How to Win My Soul." He laid special emphasis upon sacrifice and love of souls as being essential elements in soul winning. His illustrations will not soon be forgotten by those who heard them.

Rev. Brown will be given a larger hearing the next time he comes. Rev. Benjamin White of the Children's Home society conducted the preliminary exercises in the absence of the pastor, who officiated at the funeral of Mr. McCready.

Miss Lorien Struble sang a solo at the close of the sermon.

TO PLAY DUNBAR TWP.

High School Switches from Latrobe to Latrobe Team.

A change has been made in the high school football schedule. The Dunbar township high school team will be the attraction at Fayette Field

Saturday afternoon, instead of Latrobe high, as originally planned. This change has been made at the request of Charles H. Miller, principal of the Latrobe high school. Latrobe is one of the half dozen teams in the Western Pennsylvania Inter-Scholastic league that has not lost a game this year and will play Donora, another of the leaders, Saturday in an elimination contest.

The game Saturday will be one of the most interesting of the season, as

Dunbar township has an exceptionally strong team this year, having beaten

the fast West Newton team last week by a score of 32-0.

Coach Folk had a long session with his pupils yesterday afternoon, at which Saturday's game was reviewed in detail, the mistakes noted and plans for improvement made. The team is determined to close the season with two victories, with Dunbar township and Duquesne University high school as the victims. Practice on the field will be resumed tonight, and as the men are all in fairly good physical shape, several nights of strenuous practice will be held.

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

For real effectiveness, this old home-made remedy is no equal. Early and cheaply prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be controlled, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It takes only a few drops to stop a cough, and there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a pint bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pineal; then add 1½ granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup instead of sugar syrup. Either way, the full pint saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this like heat instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the passages. It promptly lessens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the sputum thin out, and the sputum itself becomes clear. This will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pineal is a most valuable concentrated compound of aromatic Norway pine extract—the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for 2½ ounces of Pineal with directions for use, and anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pineal Kelser Literary Meeting.

The sixth regular meeting of the Kelser Literary society was held Monday afternoon, November 17, in the study hall of the high school. President James Kunkle was in the chair. The roll was responded to by quotations.

After hearing the report of the financial committee for the next meeting, the following program was rendered:

Music, seventh grade; reading, "The Story of Dick Whittington," Olive Aiken; two-minute impromptus, "Glorious Country," Charles Elener;

EARL FULLER'S JAZZ BAND COMING

Fayette and Westmoreland county dance goers are excited over the announcement by the Good Time Dance Committee that it has booked the world-famous Earl Fuller's Jazz Band direct from Rector's, New York, which is the most noted amusement place of its kind in the world, to provide feature music for the dance to be given in the Parochial School Auditorium on Monday evening, November 24.

The orchestra is one of the highest-prize combinations ever appearing in this section of the country, and not only dancers, but many persons who love good dance music and whose cabinets contain many Victor, Columbia and Edison records by this famous orchestra are more than delighted that such an attraction is to be brought to this city.

LIMITING LEGION AUXILIARY MEMBERSHIP.

In deciding to have a woman's auxiliary organization of its own in preference to recognizing some organization already formed the American Legion at its annual convention acted very wisely. To have selected the Mothers of Democracy, War Mothers of America, American Women's Legion or any one of a number of organizations of the kind which have come into being would have been a discrimination against all others. Essentially these are all the same in purpose and spirit. Doubtless any one of them would fit in with the Legion plan of giving recognition to the mothers, widows, wives, sisters and daughters of service men but for reasons which the convention regarded as good and sufficient it was deemed best to discard all and build up an auxiliary peculiar to the Legion.

That membership in this organization is to be limited to the relatives of service men places it upon exactly the same footing as membership in the Legion itself. This is distinctively a service man's organization, none being eligible who did not belong to the armed forces of the United States between April 6, 1917 and November 11, 1918, both dates inclusive. It follows, therefore, that the purposes of the Legion will best be served by placing upon auxiliary membership the restriction that only those whose fathers, husbands, sons or brothers are eligible to membership in the Legion can in turn become members of the auxiliary.

When the Pennsylvania state convention, with which the auxiliary idea originated, granted permission to organize auxiliaries, rather wide latitude was given the matter of membership, making Red Cross and other home war workers eligible. It was stipulated, however, when the application of the Connellsville auxiliary for a charter was acknowledged, that the requirements as to membership would have to be determined by the national convention. That having been done it will be a source of no little disappointment to the local auxiliary as a whole and to a number of those who have become identified with it, that the membership will be confined in narrower limits than the state convention had indicated.

To continue as an auxiliary of the Milton Bishop Post, and be recognized as part of the state organization of auxiliaries and later of a national organization which will evidently grow out of the initial movement started in Connellsville, the membership requirements prescribed by the national convention will, of course, have to be complied with.

Having acquired the distinction of being the first auxiliary to be formed in Pennsylvania, and possibly also in the United States, the local organization will very naturally wish to retain the place it has won. While great reluctance will be felt at the necessity of revising the membership list to include only those defined by the Legion itself as eligible, there will not be lacking an appreciation of the fine spirit and helpfulness displayed by those who will, unfortunately, be deprived of membership.

FOR SOME THE WAR IS NOT YET OVER.

The sad circumstances of an ex-service man's death at his own hand will serve as an unpleasant reminder that the war is not over for some of the men who fought it with courage and daring that will forever be his tonic in the annals of war.

These are they who, victims of the poisonous gas, the Hun hounds employed in lieu of fair and honorable methods of warfare, or were shockingly from the Socialist and Anarchist than from the predatory man of wealth.—Quoted in Lewis' "Life of Theodore Roosevelt".

One great problem that we have before us is to preserve the rights of property; these can only be preserved if we remember that they are in less jeopardy from the Socialist and Anarchist than from the predatory man of wealth.—Quoted in Lewis' "Life of Theodore Roosevelt".

No class gains from the misfortune of another.

There is no worse enemy of the wage-worker than the man who condones mob violence in any shape or who preaches class hatred; and surely the slightest acquaintance with our industrial history should teach even the most shortsighted that the times of most suffering for our people as a whole, the times when business is stagnant and capital suffers from shrinkage and gets no return from its investments, are exactly the times of hardship and want and grim disaster among the poor. If all the existing instrumentalities of wealth could be abolished, the first and severest suffering would come among those of us who are least well off at present. The wage-worker is well off only when the rest of the country is well off, and he can best contribute to the general well-being by showing sanity and a firm purpose to do justice to others.

Having undergone experiences through which it seems impossible for men to have lived and retained their faculties, has been so severe a strain upon the constitution of many robust and vigorous young men that they have suffered serious impairment, even if escaping physical wounds. In practically all men who served overseas for a year or longer friends have observed certain changes in mood or temperament, notwithstanding pre-determination of mind or other symptoms of physical or mental distress. These are the visible evidences of the great stress of the service these men performed. Whatever the form of its manifestation it must be borne with kindly and sympathetically by all persons as an aid in bringing such sufferers back to themselves. These men did things that were abnormal in their previous experience hence, no matter how great the strength of their will, they cannot get back to the old routine within a few months.

On the whole, the lessons of discipline and attention required of the work in hand have been highly beneficial to every man who served. The experience of employers generally is that as time passes in which the service men are shaking off their army habits, they are applying themselves with greater diligence to their tasks, showing more willingness and an increasing desire to serve as faithfully in civil life as they did as soldiers.

They went overseas to do a certain thing. They finished the job with completeness. They came back intent upon getting back to work and taking up the duties of peace just as vigorously as they discharged those of war. This they are doing in the same spirit they showed in the training camps and at the front. It bears and there are found those who have not as yet regained their former stride as soldiers of peace, don't be impatient with or expect too much of them. Visualize, if you can, the kind of hell some of them went through. Remember that for some the war is not yet over.

With over 52,000,000 bushels of corn, 4,896,000 bushels of buckwheat for bacon and 24,760,000 bushels of "spuds" on hand for the winter's supply Pennsylvania should be in no danger of going hungry unless, for instance, the food profiteers beat them out in a distribution of nature's bounty.

That J. A. McCready, himself a careful driver, was killed in doing what he had repeatedly warned other drivers not to do shows that no driver can safely have too great confidence in himself when taking chances with a known danger.

The treaty game in Washington has reached the "If I don't win I won't play" stage.

The imposition of a fine of $100 and jail sentences of 30 days upon two profiteers in New York who bought sugar at 92 cents and sold it at 25¢ above the market price is a lesson the federal courts can do in the matter of protecting consumers. If the Department of Justice ever begins to translate some of its threats into action.

The Administration is much more likely to pocket some disappointment at the beginning of the treaty than Europe wants it to pocket the document entirely.

Roosevelt on Class Antagonisms

The Kansas City Star recently published a compilation of quotations from the speeches and writings of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt expressing his views on class antagonisms and the evils arising therefrom. In this period of unrest these sayings have a peculiar and timely fitness. They are as follows:

Neither Plutocracy Nor Mol-

This government is not, and never shall be a government by plutocracy. This government is not and never shall be a government by a mob. It shall continue to be in the future what it has been in the past, a government based on the theory that each man rich or poor, is to be created simply and solely on his worth as a man; that all his personal and property rights are to be safeguarded; and that he is neither to wrong others nor to suffer wrong from others.—From President Roosevelt's Message to Congress, December 5, 1906.

The Two Evils.

The triumph of the mob is just as evil a thing as the triumph of the plutocracy, and to have escaped one danger avails nothing if we succumb to the other." * * * Fundamentally there are, alike in their selfish disregard of the rights of others—From President Roosevelt's Message to Congress, December 5, 1906.

The Clash Agitator.

Any man who tries to excite class hatred, sectional hate, hate of creeds, any kind of hatred in our community, though he may affect to do it in the interest of the class he is addressing, is, in the long run, with absolute certainty, that class's own worst enemy.—President Roosevelt in Omaha, April 27, 1903.

One Law for All.

Mr. Shea, I can only repeat what I have said. I am a believer in unions. I am an honorary member of one union. But the union must obey the law; just as every man, rich or poor, must obey the law.—President Roosevelt to a strike committee, May 10, 1906.

Predatory Wealth.

One great problem that we have before us is to preserve the rights of property; these can only be preserved if we remember that they are in less jeopardy from the Socialist and Anarchist than from the predatory man of wealth.—Quoted in Lewis' "Life of Theodore Roosevelt".

No class gains from the misfortune of another.

BATTLE BETWEEN TOOTH PASTES

Who Will Settle the Argument. Let Your Druggist Be the Referee.

It must be perplexing to the reader to decide which of the claims are logical and which are unsupported when he reads the glowing advertisements of the various manufacturers of Tooth Paste.

One maker's product lays stress on the flavor. Another claims to "remove the film." Still another leaves a "clean feeling." Another calls attention to the teeth of wild animals and is reported to be highly antiseptic.

After reading all carefully, the intelligent person decides to refer the matter to the court of last resort for the true answer. The Druggist is the one whom the physicians and dentists relies upon to furnish expert advice on the action of chemicals. Why, therefore, is he not the person for you to trust? Long years of patient training and a knowledge of the relative value of the various ingredients in all chemical products have fitted him to express an opinion. He knows because he is qualified to know.

Something over 28,000 druggists in this country belong to a national association known as the American Druggist Syndicate. The national formula committee of this great association met annually in conference for 10 consecutive years in order to select the best formulas for household remedies to be manufactured in their own great laboratories maintained at Long Island City.

One of their well known preparations is A.D.S. Peredixine Tooth Paste, which has been endorsed by leading dentists in every state of the nation. Your druggist will tell you that it enjoys a fast repeating sale and its claim as a perfect product is briefly stated when he tells you that "Besides doing all that any other tooth paste can do, Peredixine whitens like peroxide."

Large production of this remarkable preparation enables you to still purchase the large tube at the old price—25 cents. Try a tube today and be convinced.

Among the prisoners, who are in the county jail, are two women, one of whom, the authorities say, was addressing the meeting when they entered.

PEARLS

Pearls are at once the most beautiful, the most prized of all jewels.
They are worn by women of influence and social standing in all countries.

Before the War we had collected and have on hand a superb collection. Today in the barren market Pearls like these are absolutely unobtainable. The result is our Pearls are priced much below the present market value. Instead of replacing by buying entirely new, and inferior Necklaces, we have built up our larger ones, by adding to smaller Necklaces on hand, and giving our patrons the benefit of lower prices. Pearls are an absolutely safe investment as they are constantly increasing in value.

PUBLISHERS WILL DISCUSS CRISIS IN PAPER SITUATION

Western Pennsylvania Dailies to Be Represented at Pittsburgh Conference.

PRICE GOES OUT OF SIGHT

Kate Per Pound Increases Since 1914:
From Three Cents a Pound to as High as 15 Cents; Manufacturers' Claim Boats Are Inevitable.

The rapid approaching crisis in the newsprint situation as affecting the small city and town papers will be considered at a conference of representatives of the Western Pennsylvania Associated Dailies in Pittsburgh on Thursday of this week at which time they will be guests of the Pittsburgh Publishers' association at a luncheon at William Penn hotel. As suggested in the call sent out by John L. Stewart of Washington Pa., president of the Western Pennsylvania association, it will be a gathering to plan getting together to conserve the limited supply of white paper on which newspapers are printed to the last pound. J. Drisco, business manager of The Courier, will be among the representatives at the conference.

With the newspaper publisher it has reached the point where it is not a matter of paying the price which is now three to four times per pound what it was before the beginning of the war but of getting enough paper to insure continuation in business at all. What to do to meet the situation will be fully discussed at the Pittsburgh meeting.

That there is a shortage of paper is generally admitted but it is charged that manufacturers and brokers have been operating together and the manufacturers have taken advantage of the opportunities to boost the price just as high as the publishers will pay. New record prices are being made almost daily and the manufacturers and brokers are making tremendous profits it is charged. The makers sell to the jobbers through the brokers and the jobbers from whom the publishers must get their supplies are helpless in the face of conditions and many of them, selling under contract are said to be doing so at an actual loss.

The jobbers are accepting even orders as are necessary to keep regular customers supplied and when they attempt to get the paper with which to fill these orders it is said they find the manufacturers' prices out of all proportion to those at which they have sold to their customers. The result is that the situation has become so serious that the jobbers in many instances are considering withdrawing from the print market entirely.

Many small dailies are being confronted with the danger of being forced out of business on account of inability to secure paper while the price has advanced to such extent that some solution must be found to meet the situation of increased cost of operation.

In 1914 and 1915 the New York and Chicago daily papers were buying print paper at two cents a pound delivered to their press rooms. During 1915 the price began to jump and for 1916 many of the papers had to contract at prices from three to three and one-half cents on cars at the mills. Today three and one-half cent paper would be extremely welcome by papers large and small.

A few days ago, according to a story from New York, 13 cents a pound on cars at the mill was asked for earlead lo, and the quotation was made to one of the largest consumers of white paper in the country. The maker, it was reported, refused to agree to a price less than 13 cents. In Chicago it is reported a large day made an offer of 10 cents a pound for 10,000 tons of newspaper, and could not find a mill to take the order. The Chicago papers, it is said, are being forced to omit a large part of their advertising because of shortage of paper. A dispatch from Washington says that complaints of inability to secure paper are pouring into government offices and prices of eight, nine and as high as 12 cents, are said to have been asked by the makers.

In a measure, it is said the demand for wood ordinarily used in making paper pulp for building material has produced a paper shortage. The makers take the ground that they are working to capacity and turning out as much paper as ever. They add that the country-wide increase in newspaper and magazine advertising has increased consumption of paper stock until there is a greater demand than can be supplied.

The whole situation as it affects the Western Pennsylvania publishers is expected to be threshed out at the Pittsburgh meeting.

A Simple Way to Get the Benefit of the Best Senna

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Peppermint contains the finest Egyptian Senna, as recommended by the U. S. P.

A GREAT many people, habitually constipated, find relief in chewing senna leaves or brewing them into a tea and drinking it. They will be glad to know that they can obtain senna already brewed, at no greater expense and in a much more convenient and agreeable form.

The chief laxative constituent of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Peppermint is Egyptian senna (Cassia acutifolia) gathered in the Egyptian Sudan. This grade is seldom sold at retail. It is, however, recognized as best in the U. S. Pharmacopeia because of its freedom from gumming and its cleanse action on the intestines, and because it does not lose its effect after repeated use.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Peppermint the Egyptian senna is combined with peppermint oil, making an exceptionally valuable laxative in dyspepsia and other disturbances of the stomach and bowels. It has been on the market since 1892 and many thousands of people who formerly bought an inferior grade of senna at retail now buy Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Peppermint for 50c and $1 in large bottles. It is sold in all drug stores.

One of the first uses of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Peppermint is the largest among his patients in the world, there being a certain number of sales each year.

It is used in the treatment of constipation, piles, hemorrhoids, etc.

HANDLING WAR RISK MAIL IS GIGANTIC TASK

More Than 100,000 Letters Are Received Every Day.

WORK NIGHT AND DAY SHIFTS

Early Willingness to Conform to Requirements is Manifested in Letters Received by the Hundreds of Thousands—Identification of Cases Often Impossible Because Necessary Information is Lacking—How Correspondence is Handled.

Dear government. This is to let you know that I am staying a while in my folks at Simpkins Falls." And this loyal, patriotic American then thought that in that message faithfully had complied with the repeated injunction, "Don't fail to turn the bureau of war risk insurance of change of address."

Another conscientious mother who I been duly instructed in the fact it is often difficult to identify a letter unless specific information be en in the letter of inquiry addressed to the bureau, asked for news of my boy Jim." You must have heard Jim, because he's six feet tall." Of course she couldn't be expected to know that that wasn't just the sort descriptive information which might go in placing Jim, nor do I, that said regiment known as "Perry's Own," made up of units from over the country, there were 2,700 who stood six feet and better. The mother for whom "the boy" had to allotment and asked governmentance answered the formal inquiry to whether she had other sources of news with the painstakingly conscientious statement, "Only Fred's here."

Show Hearty Willingness. Go into the bureau of war risk insurance by the hundreds of thousands the letters bearing their manifestoes of hearty willingness to conform to requirements and simple irreducible honesty, but frequently so us in respect to necessary information as to render identification of cases difficult if not impossible. The mail section of the bureaus 16-hour basis with one shift work from nine in the morning to five in the afternoon and a night shift from to eight in the morning, handling city from the post office all mailing during the night.

During the period October, 1915, to October, 1919, this section received, classified and distributed a total of 8,866,533 pieces of mail, and for same period received from the various divisions of the bureau, arranged to states, and forwarded to city post offices a total of 22,927,508 pieces of mail. This makes a grand total of 32,894,041 pieces of mail passing through the mail section during course of twelve months.

On July 14, 1919, the mail section, instructions from Director R. G. Meeker-Jones, took over the arrangements of all tenders in payment for insurance premiums. These instances during the period July 14 to October 14 numbered 1,203, at a valuation of $8,784,186.38.

Takes On Additional Duties.

The mail section from time to time takes on additional duties in order to serve the various divisions of the bureau, and is functioning with a percentage of errors than the maximum allowed by the United States Office.

The bureau's mail trucks make daily trips between the post office, the Arlington building, and also at nine offices of the bureau outside of the Arlington building, and at eleven other government offices.

Found the first of the month the comes in at the rate of about 40 pieces a day, later falling to 4 or 50,000.

Equivalents receipts make up about of the entire incoming mail during the first half of the month. Seventy-five per cent of all mail received by the insurance division of the Bureau.

Each mail section also handles each 75,000 to 100,000 pieces of out-mail and about 30,000 pieces of departmental mail. Between December 1, 1918, and September 30, the bureau received 4,603,465 discharge notices alone. In January the discharge notices rose to 635.

In August it reached the high mark of 760,326. The total number of pieces of incoming mail received during August was 2,287,438.

How Mail Is Handled.

As it comes from the mail sack, sorted unopened into 31 classes, letters are run through the lettering machines at a rate of from two to three hundred a minute.

On the letter openers the mail to forty women expert mail readers, who make 48 separations of the mail to them. It takes good speed as well as good memory to be unerringly aware of which of the odds a letter belongs, but the mail reader does it at the rate of 900 to 1,000 letters a day.

Letters containing checks, money orders or other valuable inclosures, go to a group of girls in the next room, sit around a big table covered with wire baskets. All checks are listed and the lists verified, and

Blouses Increase in Importance

An excursion through the shops in search of new blouses is as intriguing as an expedition after wild flowers. Where there is so much variety and beauty to be found there is an equal amount of zest in making selections. The autumn brought variety in styles, in materials, in methods of decorating the new blouses, and, for several reasons, their place in the wardrobe is increased in importance. One of these reasons is the "high cost of dressing." The suit blouse is not confined to tailored styles nowadays, but undertakes to fit a suit for many occasions. In the company of a handsome separate skirt, lovely blouses are able to face any occasion with assurance.

The overblouse and the smock style are the important new features in the season's showings. In the overblouse, two materials or two colors of one material are used to make the blouse—as crepe georgette over chiffon, or net or satin. In the smock-style the blouse has a peplum and a girdle, as shown in the figure at the right of the picture above. This particular model embodies several details of the mode in the flaring sleeves, the shape of the neck opening, the silk cord and tassels forming the girdle, and the management of the embroidered decoration. It is made of georgette, crepe and embroidered with silk

Evans Triple Phosphates Most Rapid Strength Producer Known Says Authority

Nerve Shattered People; Worried and Physically Unit Can Regain Old Time Energy and Ambition.

In these strenuous times men and women who would be successful must keep in top condition. In nearly every profession and trade the man with plenty of vigor, a keen mind, a clear brain and confidence born of good red blood, is the man who is the envy of hundreds who lack these qualities and are in continual fear of being overtaken.

Most people who lack the energy to go ahead and do things they know they ought to do are capable of doing, probably need more iron in the blood. But iron alone as a strength builder is not looked on seriously by the great minds of the medical profession.

Iron in order to be of greatest benefit as an upbuilding preparation must be combined with other vitalizing agents that are known to create steady nerves, muscular strength and more brain power and must be in liquid form.

Evans Triple Phosphate is just such a preparation, and the reason it is put in liquid form is because liquids are more easily assimilated and surely do get into the blood.

Good advice to every person who wants increased strength, a more vigorous body, nerves that never tire, a clear brain and strong bones is to take daily doses of Evans Triple Phosphate. It is to take a regular dose of Evans Triple Phosphate in a wine glass of water 5 to 10 minutes before meals and at bedtime.

The rapid increase in health and strength experienced by those who carefully follow these directions prove the value of Evans Triple Phosphate as a recuperative tonic to have Troubles, Asthma, Chlorosis, Blood Disorders, Prostrations following fever, and in general convalescence. While the patient who is just recovering from influenza, pneumonia or other diseases is wasting away, Evans Triple Phosphate will quickly restore the rundown system, increase the appetite and enrich the blood.

All good pharmacists dispense Evans Triple Phosphate in the original bottles. You are sure to get it at C. Roy's.

—Adv.

The letters with the inclosures pinned to them sent in locked boxes to the proper office.

Letters containing a change of address go to another group. These changes are often tampered with and, unfortunately, are not always legible. Frequently the writer gives no address at all in the letter.

Since the postmaster or the rural delivery carrier and everybody about the village knows the writer so intimately, giving an address in the letter seems quite unnecessary to many who write and who sometimes, in spite of all efforts put forth to identify the case, fail to receive an answer.

Must Be Copied.

Letters asking for information on more than one subject must be copied so that they may be referred to the various sections whence the information may be obtained. Several times three or four copies must be made, and this job keeps a large group of typists and clerks busy.

The letters which contain insufficient information must be run against the great card index identification files for a number which will fix the identity of the man in question, whereupon it is attached to that man's papers.

A night force works from five to midnight attaching new correspondence to these papers, which are the original Form 1-B and all letters received concerning the case.

But on other than these cases where checking of the files has to be done, the work is kept current day after day. Except on Mondays, when two days' mail has accumulated, every piece of mail received in the 24 hours preceding three o'clock has been placed in manila folders, the folders labeled and listed and tramped off in a big boxlike wheeled carrier to the subsection to which it belongs, and from these various sections the reply goes back as quickly as is humanly possible when the gigantic volume of more than a hundred thousand letters daily is considered.

EVERS COMING BACK TO MANAGE PIRATES

Veteran Will Succeed Hugo Bezdek, Who Has Resigned.

Former Leader of Cubs and Braves Is in Better Health Than for Several Years and Is Confident of Making Good.

Johnny Evers is to be back in the National League next year as manager. He's to replace Hugo Bezdek as pilot of the Pittsburgh Pirates, according to information obtained in Cincinnati during the world's series. The announcement of his appointment will probably not be made until the meeting of the league on December 11. President Barney Dreyfuss desires to start building up his club earlier than usual and asks Evers' assistance in doing so.

Dreyfuss, in choosing Evers to replace Bezdek, is not discharging his manager, but is so far as have accepted his resignation. Hugo is a college coach and is now devoting his time to drilling the Penn State football eleven and it is understood he would prefer to stay there all season writes Oscar Reichow, in Chicago Daily News. This past season he experienced a nervous breakdown as a result of trying to keep the Pirates in the race. Rather than impair his health he left the club flat on its back in New York and rushed to his home in Pittsburgh for a rest. This, it is believed, convinced him that his duties are with the college.

The Pirates' president attended the series games in Cincinnati and was to conference with Evers on several occasions.

rasions, but decided he was talking to him for the purpose of securing him to lead his club. It is known that Evers is most desirous of returning to baseball after an absence of two years. He declared to the writer that his health is finer now than it has been in many years and that he believed he is capable of taking a club and making a success of it. While he did not solicit Bezdek's position, it is known that several friends went to the front for him and succeeded in arranging a meeting with Dreyfuss.

Evers managed the Cubs in 1913 and finished third in the team. He replaced Frank Chance as leader, but was let out after the race and sold to the Boston Braves, for whom he played in 1914, assisting materially in winning the National League and world's series pennants. Evers was not a success as a manager, although there are few in baseball, if any, who know more about the game or the running of a club on the field. His only difficulty was in getting along with his players. He was too drastic on the field and by his severity aroused the displeasure and incurred the enmity of his players. Had his men played ball the way he desired them to play the Cubs might have won the championship this season.

Evers realized the mistake he made and now that his health is greatly improved feels he can take a hand and handle it as well as any other manager in the game. He wants the chance and is going to go with the Pittsburgh club, with which he may prove himself capable, as this team has players around whom a championship organization can be built. Evers knows this, and for that reason would rather lead the Pirates than any other club in the league.

FATHER TRAINS NEW LAWN TENNIS CRACK

Latest Sensation of Courts Gives His Parent Credit.

Young Star Began Practicing for Net Honors When Ten Years of Age—Swimming Was Valuable Training Asset.

Gerald Patterson, the newest Australian lawn tennis star, who is putting his skill against America's best, was not trained and developed by Norman E. Brooks. Far from it.

The young star gives credit to no one but his own father, who began grooming the boy for lawn tennis honors when he was ten years old. And the course of training included not only lawn tennis, but swimming, football and cricket.

In a conversation with a friend just after the recent triumph at Wimborne, where he beat Brooks in the final round for the so-called world's championship, Patterson said:

"I received no instruction from any champion. My father, who was really a good player, took me in hand when I was ten years old, and I picked up many valuable methods as the result of his teachings.

"He considered that if I was to make my mark among the first-class players I would have to train hard. And this was a doctrine he took care to see that I followed. He had me out of bed at six o'clock every morning, and and I practiced together on a hard asphalt court at our Melbourne home.

"Having to deal with high bounding balls, I was able to develop and then perfect the backhand drive. I also accustomed myself to making a terrific smash on every occasion when I had to maneuver into the correct position.

"Swimming also was a valuable asset in my training, but I cultivated other forms of athletic pursuits as well and each served for general benefit."

Patterson made his first public appearance when he was twelve years old and a student at Melbourne college.

"When the war broke out Patterson was mobilized for garrison duty and later suffered an attack of appendicitis and was operated on. When he recovered his health he went to England and received a commission in the field artillery. He reached France in time for the Somme offensive of 1918 and saw much service on the western front as well as in Italy. He served the military cross at Messines.

Patterson was captain of his college cricket team for two years and distinguished himself as football and high-jumping.

WORLD'S GREAT PORTS.

UTILIZING PASSPORT LAW

Wartime Regulations Extended for a Year Will Help in Excluding Radicals Who Might Scheme to Overthrow Our Government.

By JAMES P. HORNADAY.

Washington.—Congress having extended wartime passport regulations another year, Secretary of State Lansing is now making up a force of government agents whose duty it will be to see that undesirable men and women do not obtain passports that will admit them to the United States. A fund of $800,000 has been placed at the disposal of the secretary of state for use in keeping out the undesirables. Mr. Lansing in a recent appearance before the committee on foreign affairs of the house of representatives characterized the work as delicate, difficult and expensive. To perform it properly, the state department says will require the services of at least 225 special employees, placed in accordance with the needs of the service in the great ports of the world from which the tide of immigration flows to the United States.

The disposition in congress has been not to extend war legislation, but in this particular case it saw the importance of doing so. The immigration laws of the country, which are enforced through the department of labor, say that persons who would not make fit citizens of the United States shall not be permitted to enter the country, but the difficulty about keeping undesirables out under that general legislation is that a proper investigation of the person who desires to enter is not made at his old home. The state department will not attempt to regulate immigration as such; under the authority that has just been extended, but it will attempt to see that the immigration laws are not violated in any respect.

PUTS CHECK ON IMMIGRANTS

There will be built up under the direction of the secretary of state and in close co-operation with the immigration authorities of the department of interior, a system of passport control which can be made effective. Under this system aliens desiring to proceed from any foreign country to the United States will have to obtain a visa on their passports of the American consular officer at the port of departure. The men who will make up the special force of 225 will do the investigating and inform the consular officers as to whether the passport should be approved.

If congress had any doubt about the advisability of extending the passport control for another year it was removed by the showing made by the state department that the elements of unrest and disorder which were kept more or less under subjection during the war have, since the armistice was signed, broken their bounds in various quarters, particularly in Russia and central Europe. The state department informed congress that it had every reason to believe that a large number of aliens who do not belong in the form of government now existing in the United States would attempt to come to this country on the formal declaration of peace, and that many of them would come for the express purpose of carrying on anarchistic agitation. Reports to the state department indicate that anarchistic organizations in foreign lands are engaged in a propaganda which extends beyond the limits of their own country and includes the United States, and these reports also show that those anarchistic organizations are attempting to send agents to this country to spread their propaganda.

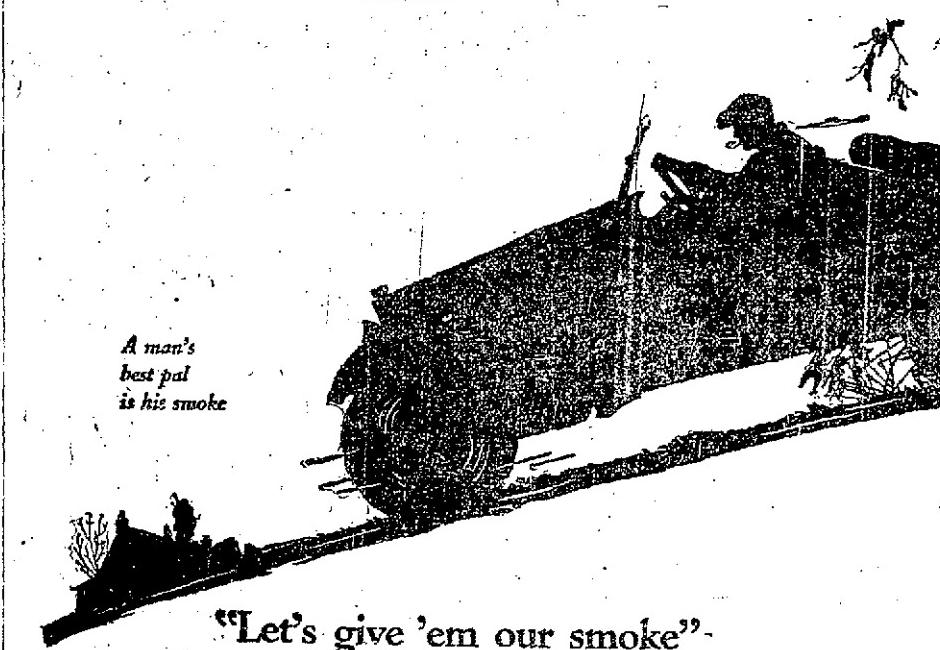

FURTHER LEGISLATION PROBABLE

The extension of the wartime passport regulations for another year is the only step congress has taken thus far toward regulating after-war immigration. Legislation amending the present immigration laws so as to further restrict the tide of incoming aliens is being considered in committee in both senate and house. The prospect is, as members of these committees say, that new barriers will be raised within the next few months. The government recently has received from its European representatives a great deal of information going to show that unless rigid restricted measures are adopted, there will be an unprecedented movement toward America. The reports show that al the free opportunity tens of thousands of persons from central Europe will come to the United States. The desire to come to this country is being strongly manifested among Germans in nearly every German city, and in Austria the desire to reach the United States is even more pronounced.

The Italians, according to the government's advice, are showing more of an inclination to stay at home than ever before. In fact the movement is toward Italy rather than away from it. Within the last three months many thousand Italians in the United States have applied for passports to go home and most of them have indicated that they expect to remain in Italy.

His nights were busy with his investigations, but on Sunday, as usual, he went out to the Duncans'. Mrs. Duncan explained that Edith had gone to visit a girl friend in the country; would be gone away for some time. Dave felt a foolish annoyance that she should have left town. She might at least have called him up. Why should she call him up? Of course not? Still, the town was very empty. He drove with Mrs. Duncan in the afternoon, and at night took a long walk by the river. He had a vague but oppressive sense of loneliness. He had not realized what part of his life these Sunday afternoons with Edith had come to be.

A few days later Conward strolled in, with the inevitable cigarette. He smoked in silence until Dave completed a story.

"Good stuff you're giving us," he commented, when the article was finished. "Remember what I told you the other day? It's just like putting a match to tinder. Now we're off."

Conward smoked a few minutes in silence, but Dave could not fail to see the excitement under his calm exterior. He had, as he said, decided to "sit" in the biggest game ever played. The intoxication of sudden wealth had already dried his blood.

He slipped a bill to Dave. "For your services in that little transaction," he exclaimed.

Elden held the bill in his fingers gingerly, as though it might carry infection, as in very truth it did. He realized that he stood at a turning point—that everything the future held for him might rest on his present decision. There remained in him not a little of the fine, stern honor of the ranchman of the open range; an honor curious, sometimes terrible, in his interpretation of right and wrong, but a fine, stern honor nevertheless. And he instinctively felt that to accept this money would compromise him for evermore. As he turned the bill in his fingers he noticed that it was for one hundred dollars. He thought it was ten.

"I can't take that much," he exclaimed. "It isn't fair."

"Fair enough," said Conward, well pleased that Dave should be impressed

CHAPTER VII.

David Elden smoked his after-dinner cigar in his bachelor quarters. The years had been good to the firm of Conward & Elden; good far beyond the wildness of their first dreams. The transaction of the section bought from the English absences had been but the beginning of bigger and more daring adventures. Conward, in that first wild prophecy of his, had spoken of a city of a quarter of a million people; already more lots had been sold than could be occupied by four times that population.

Dave had often asked himself where it all would end.

The firm of Conward & Elden had profited not the least in the wild years of gain-getting. Their mahogany-furnished first-floor quarters were the last word in office luxuriance. Conward's private room might credit his house as a premier or a president. Its purpose was to be impressive rather than to give any other service, as Conward spent little of his time there. On Dave fell the responsibility of office management, and his room was fitted for efficiency rather than luxury. It commanded a view of the long general office where a battery of stenographers and clerks took care of the details of the business of Conward & Elden. And Dave had established his ability as an office manager. His fairness, his fearlessness, his impartiality, his courtesy, his even temper—rare or rare and excusable occasions—had won from the staff a loyalty which Conward, with all his abilities as a good mixer, could never have commanded.

He had prospered, of course. His statement to his banker ran into seven figures. Dave was still a young man, not yet in his thirties; he was rated a millionaire; he had health, comeliness, and personality; he commanded the respect of a wide circle of business men and was regarded as one of the matrimonial prizes of the city; his name had been discussed for public office; he was a success.

And yet this night, as he sat in his comfortable room and watched the street lights, come fluttering on as twilight silhouetted the great hills to the west, he was not so sure of his success.

Pure Cleansing Massage Cream

Pleasant Greaseless Cream Removes Skin Impurities and Cleanse Complexion.

The most marred and delicate skin quickly responds to the soothing antiseptic power of Hokari—a safe antiseptic skin tonic and cream. Careful treatment for just a few days—then pimples and rough skin are a thing you forget—the skin is so clear and clean by the antiseptic effects of this splendid cream.

Although a superior massage cream is to be built, and we'll see that it runs through our land. We may have to "cross" somebody, but it's a poor engineer that saves on grease. Then it is city property. A street railroad system is to be built, and we'll sell them at two hundred dollars each for those nearest the city down to one hundred for those farthest out—average cost hundred and fifty—total nine hundred and sixty thousand dollars. Allow, say, sixty thousand for grease and there is still nine hundred thousand, and that doesn't count resale commissions. Dave, it's good for a cool million."

Dave was doing rapid thinking. Suddenly he faced Conward and their eyes met. "Conward," he said, "you don't need my little hundred to put this over. Why do you let me in on it?" Conward smiled and breathed easily. There had been a moment of tension. "Oh, that's simple," he answered. "I figure we'll travel well in double harness. I'm a good mixer—I know people—and I've got ideas. And you're sound and honorable and people trust you."

"Thanks," said Dave, dryly.

"That's right," Conward continued. "We'll be a combination hard to beat."

Dave had never felt sure of Conward, and now he felt less sure than ever. But the lust of easy money was beginning to stir within him. The bill in his hands represented more than three weeks' wages. Conward was making money—making money fast, and surely here was an opportunity such as comes once in a lifetime.

"I'll go you," he said to Conward, at last. "I'll risk this hundred, and a little more, if necessary."

"Good," said Conward, springing to his feet and taking Dave's hand in a warm grasp. "Now we're away. But you better play safe. Stick to your pay-check here until we pull the deal through. There won't be much to do until then, anyway, and you can help more by guiding the paper along right lines."

"It sounds like a fairy tale," Dave demurred, as though unwilling to credit the possibilities Conward had outlined. "You're sure it can be done?"

"Done? Why, son, it has been done in all the big centers in the States, and at many a place that'll never be a center at all. And it will be done here. Dave, bigger things than you dare dream of are looming up right ahead."

"It Would Be Mean to Put Over Anything Like That on a Man, and a Girl Wouldn't Have Me."

"Not exactly burst. It will not be so sudden as that. It will just go away like a toy balloon pricked with a pin."

There was silence for some minutes. When she spoke at length it was with a tinge of bitterness. "So you are unloading?"

"The firm is. I beg you, Bert, to believe that if I had known your intention I would have tried to dissuade you."

"Why me particularly? I am only one of the great public. Why don't you give your conclusions to the world? Now that you see the reaction setting in doesn't honesty suggest what your course should be?"

There was reproach in her voice. Dave thought, rather than bitterness.

He spread out his hands. "What's the use? The harm is done. To predict a collapse would be to precipitate a panic. It is as though we were passengers on a boat at sea. You and I know the boat is sinking, but the other passengers don't. They are making merriment with champagne and motorcars—if you can accept that figure—and revelry and easy money. Why spoil their remaining few hours by telling them they are headed for the bottom?"

After a moment she placed her fingers on his arm. "Forgive me, Dave."

"I didn't mean to whine."

"You didn't whine," he returned, almost fiercely. "It's not you. You are too good a sport. But there will be lots of whining in the coming months."

Manlike, it did not occur to Dave that in that moment the girl had bid goodbye to her savings of a dozen years and had merely looked up and said, "Forgive me, Dave. I didn't mean to whine."

He glanced at his watch. "It's late for a theater," he said, "but we can ride. Which do you say—auto or horseback?"

"I can't go horseback in these clothes and I don't want to change."

Dave pressed a button and the omnipresent Chinese "boy" stood before him. "My car," he said. "The two-passenger car. I shall not want a driver."

"A little late in the meal for that, isn't it? But the fact is, I have invested."

A look came into his face which she did not understand. "With whom?" he demanded, almost perceptibly.

"With Conward & Elden," she answered, and the roughness of her voice suggested that her despised family lay not far from the surface. "Are you about to be jealous?"

"Why didn't you come to me?"

She realized that he was in deep earnest. "I did," she answered carefully. "At least, I asked for you, but you were out of town, so Conward took me in hand and I followed his advice."

"Do you trust Conward?" he demanded, almost fiercely.

"Bring something to eat. Go out for it and be quick. For two."

"You've had your dinner, surely?" asked Bert.

"Such a dinner as a man eats alone," he answered. "Now for something real. You stick to the paper like the ink, don't you, Bert?"

"Real estate is the only subject I would trust him on," she continued. "I must say, Dave, that for a shrewd business man you are awfully dense about Conward."

He remained silent for a few moments. He decided not to follow her lead. He knew that if she had anything explicit to say about Conward she would say it when she felt the time to be opportune, and not until then.

"How much do you invest?"

"Not much. Just what I had."

"You mean all your savings?"

"Why not? It's all right, isn't it?"

He had risen and was standing by the window.

"It's all right, isn't it?" she repeated.

"I'm afraid it isn't!" he said, at length, in a restrained voice. "I'm afraid it isn't."

"What do you mean?" she demanded.

"Bert," he continued, "did it ever occur to you that this thing must have an end—that we can't go on forever lifting ourselves by our own bootstraps? We have built a city here, a great and beautiful city, almost as a wizard might build it by magic overnight. There was room for it here; there was occasion; there was justification. But there was neither occasion nor justification for turning miles and miles of prairie land into city lots—lots which in the nature of things cannot possibly, in your time of mine, be required for city purposes. These lots should be producing wheat, oats, potatoes, cows, butter—that's what we must build our city on. We have been considering the effect rather than the cause. The cause is the country, the neglected country, and until it overtake the city we must stand still; if we do not go back. Our prosperity is built on borrowed money, and we have forgotten that borrowed money must some time be repaid."

"You mean that the boom is about to burst?" she said.

SAGE AND SULPHUR DARKENS GRAY HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Restore Color, Gloss and Attrac.iveness.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, bring back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair...as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Nov. 17.—The Prince of Wales began the last day of his stay here with a brisk run around the half-mile athletic field and then took a plunge in the swimming pool. After breakfast the prince, who seems never to know when he is tired, went to the golf links where he expected to spend the remainder of the day lunching at the club house.

More than once since his arrival here the prince has expressed regret that he was unable to spend more time in the United States. He expressed the hope today that it would not be long before he could pay another visit to this country in order that he might see the western states.

A section in which he has shown the deepest interest and concern which he has asked many questions.

THE SOISSON.

"THE BRAT"—Starring Nazimova, the celebrated Russian actress, is a big feature today.

Oddly enough, "The Brat" is the first of Nazimova's stage or screen impersonations that presents her as an American girl. Her great fame hitherto has been derived from portrayals of Latin and other European types; but as an American girl—and a pillar of humanity at that—she discloses anew her remarkable ability as a female virtuoso of the emotions.

The story narrates the whimsical

NAZIMOVA in "THE BRAT"

Romance of "the brat," a nameless child of the charity institutions who drifts into the chorus of a cheap musical show, is insulted and then haled to the night court on a trumped up charge. There an author who is seated on the bench with the judge sees in her just the "type" he has been seeking as the heroine of a new novel he is to write.

MacMillan Forrester, the author, takes the bedraggled child-woman to his home, shocking his aristocratic mother and arousing the angry resentment of Angela, his blushing fiancée. From studying his protege, the writer's interest grows deeper, while she worships him and seeks constantly to show her gratitude.

The novelist's brother is an elder. It was he who insisted "the brat" had had her haled to the night court. He later confronts her in his home. They are, of course, enemies, but the girl shows her noble qualities by intervening when the weak brother is about to commit suicide. After many trials see triumph, and the ending is both happy and unexpected.

Nazimova's acting is superb, and her adroit characterization is heightened by the generally humorous quality of the subtitles which convey "the brat's" odd collection of slang phrases and whimsical philosophy. Mr. Bryan does excellent work as the absent

THE PARAMOUNT.

"IN HONOR'S WER"—An interesting production, featuring Harry Morey, is being shown today.

Frank Powell has a code of honor similar to that in vogue in the days of chivalry. He is secretly in love with Olive Meade, but when he learns that his brother is also attracted to the girl he does not press the suit. One day Powell learns that Irene Carson has a secret love affair with Rodney Foster. Foster makes an uncomplimentary remark about Irene in Powell's presence, and the latter knocks Foster down, threatening to kill him if he, Foster, does not behave himself.

That night Irene has a clandestine meeting with Foster. Powell follows her and sees her coming away from Foster's home. He promises to keep what he has seen a secret. The next morning Foster is found murdered. Powell is charged with the crime and convicted. Olive learns the truth and tries to save Powell, realizing that he is the man she really loves. How Powell is cleared of the charge without involving Irene Carson furnishes a very dramatic climax.

A selected comedy is also being shown. Tomorrow Bessie Barriscale, the popular star, will appear in "The White Lie," a story of one woman and two men. Miss Barriscale, noted for her strong emotional talent and her versatility, as Dorothy Kingsley, the wife who lied, has a powerful dramatic role that requires great subtlety.

ARCADE THEATRE.

THE KUSSELL MUSICAL MIDGETS opened a week's engagement at the Arcade theatre yesterday afternoon to a crowded matinee audience, and to say that it pleased would be putting it mildly. The little players were the source of laughter and applause from the very beginning. And the Palm Beach girls performed capably in the musical numbers. Major Don Ward with his ready marvelous display of muscular ability was a big hit, and Louis Stoeger as the Jew comedian brought rounds of laughter. Hotel à la carte was a big hit with the audience and no doubt capacity houses will greet these entertaining little people during their stay in Connellsville. On Wednesday the midgets will offer a complete change of program entitled the Floorwalker, a side-splitting farce comedy. All the specialties will be new and the wardrobe changed completely. In addition to the midgets the usual serial picture will be shown.
